June 2021

Dear Parents and Students,

I pray your summer is filled with the blessing of books!

Attached is a list of possible books to read.

Summer Bridge Activities also contains a summer reading list in the front section of the workbook.

Please note that reading should never be viewed as a chore but instead a delightful undertaking to enrich one's life.

My goal, when it comes to reading, is to make life-long readers of my students.

Here are some helpful hints to encourage your child to build a relationship with books:

Read together!

Not only is this a wonderful way to spend time together but also it sends a message to your child that you value books and reading.

If your child is reading a chapter book, you might suggest that you read a chapter to her/him and then she/he read a chapter to you, alternating chapters as you go.

Visit your local library and if your child does not have a library card, by all means – get her/him one. Afterwards, go out for ice cream to celebrate her/his entry into the Reading Community.

Set time aside each day to read together.

Set a blanket up outside, bring cookies and lemonade and have a picnic as you read.

If your child wants to read silently to her/himself, bring your own book and read along side your child.

Fill your house with books!

Summer garage sales are a fantastic way to pick up some low cost books.

Abebooks.com is also a good source for purchasing books.

Make sure your child sees you reading often.

Children learn more from what is modeled than what is said.

In closing....just read, read, read. As Thomas Jefferson said, "I cannot live without books."

May your summer be filled with the enchantment and magic of books!

Blessings!
